

I am writing to express my concern that the new rules may force current FM translators off the air in favor of new LPFM stations. One of my favorite FM translator stations is K-Love. K-Love offers a true alternative to everything else on the radio. I never have to worry that something embarrassing or offensive will be said in front of my children or grandchildren. In my area, K-love is available on 88.3, 99.5, and 91.1. I have my car radio buttons set to all three, so I can stay tuned in as I travel around. K-Love serves the community by providing a commercial-free place for people of faith to hear information relevant to them. K-Love also provides musical entertainment that is free from offensive material. If K-love were forced off the air in favor of commercial broadcasters, the community would lose an important source of clean family-friendly news and entertainment. Please ensure that the move to license LPFM is structured so that it doesn't destroy existing translator broadcasters like K-Love. Thanks.
